Dear Doctor Carlson:

Thank you for your letter of the 22nd. I should think there could be no question that the papers can be photographically reproduced from the original journals. In some cases, it might be necessary to separate the articles from the binding in order to get a first class copy. But the expense of rebinding will be small by comparison with the cost of new composition and would give a better product.

I would be very happy to write a prefatory statement. Please let me know how long this should be and when you would require it.

I am sorry that it is reasonably certain that I will not be able to attend in person.

Yours sincerely,

Joshua Lederberg
Professor of Genetics
